

The Sino-American Cultural Exchange focuses on fostering communication and friendship between students as well as the families of our Bryan-College Station community. Student groups of Chinese and American students will get to interact and share their experiences while bonding with a host family from the community. Students and families will be free to plan events as well as take part in planned activities to help expose international students to the community while sharing about their own culture.

and Scholars Associations

The MSC Leland T. and Jessie W. Jordan Institute for International Awareness first opened its doors in December 1986 through a generous endowment from Mrs. Jessie W. Jordan in the name of her late husband, Leland Thomas Jordan. Having lived abroad most of their lives, they knew the importance of traveling abroad and wanted to give Texas A&M University students the opportunity to experience it themselves. Since then, the Jordan Institute has evolved into a flagship organization providing innovative and creative international education programs at Texas A&M University.

The Chinese Students and Scholars Association (CSSA) is a student organization at Texas A&M University with the purpose of presenting Chinese culture and providing opportunities for cultural interactions to students.

Sino-American Cultural Exchange

Bringing people together...

We have several thousand international students at the Texas A&M University College Station campus. Many of these students have never been inside an American home and are eager to learn more about our culture and community. To give them this opportunity, the MSC Leland T. and Jessie W. Jordan Institute for International Awareness is partnering with the Chinese Students and Scholars Association to bring together curious and outgoing Chinese and American students to help facilitate cultural exchange and understanding.

Our goal is for these students to be able to really experience what American culture is like and in return share their own country and experiences.
